About the Book

Adolescence is a developmental stage commonly thought to be a time of physical, emotional, and psychological vulnerability. Embedded among the complexities of this life stage are issues of self and identity. This course is intended to enable the process of exploration and thereby help students attain an understanding of the concepts of personality and identity. Two main objectives are thus envisioned: the introduction of major theories of personality – its nature, development and dynamics as well as those forces and factors that lead to the formation of a self and identity; and the provision of experiential learning activities that help students explore and understand their own concerns and issues relating to their personality and identity. The overall coverage is as follows under three sections:

In Section 1 you will know the concept of self, self development and conflict management as well as how to develop self skills. The importance of life stage and self concept formation is also covered when you come to understand that it is during adolescence that you are trying to determine how far you will step outside of your comfort zone or whether you will stay within a safe zone.

Section 2 presents insight into peace and how it helps to promote human rights, demonstrate values and values to create the feeling of love, trust, tolerance and friendship among people.

Section 3 addresses the role of teacher in developing understanding of self among learners in terms of enabling students to learn more than they would on their own, and to prepare the possibilities that each student can realize their potentials regardless of their situation in life.

Understanding the Self

Personal growth is the ongoing process of understanding and developing yourself in order to achieve your fullest potential. Personal development is a vital part in a person's growth, maturity, success and happiness. It is the foundation of emotional, physical, intellectual and spiritual health. Personal development in individuals is a continuous learning process that helps in personal life, professional career development and also inters personal relationship development. However, this is an area that needs conscious investment of time, effort and practice to continually learn and develop. And student life is a perfect point to get started on this direction. As we progress in life, our circumstances and environment keeps changing and as an individual we keep getting into different roles such as a friend, spouse, parent, leader etc. This course aims to excel in the role they are given and prepare to adapt, face and handle different situations with utmost style and sincerity.

Adolescence is a developmental stage commonly thought to be a time of physical, emotional, and psychological vulnerability. Foremost among the concerns of this life stage are issues of self and identity. This course is intended to enable the process of exploration and thereby help students arrive at an understanding of the concepts of personality, self and identity. Two major objectives are thus envisioned: the introduction of major theories of personality – its nature, development and dynamics as well as those forces and factors that lead to the formation of a self and identity; and the provision of experiential learning so as to ground these theories and perspectives in students' concerns and issues relating to their personal self and identity. The content coverage is in five units under three sections.

The Book comes with a companion DVD for rich learning experience, which includes:

1. E-Book with further reading and learning links.
2. Interactive E-lecture of each chapter. E-lectures are expressive, informational, entertaining and persuasive, it uses the tool of self-exploration, which makes it easy to learn and understand each topic in detail.
