

MASS MEDIA AND POLITICAL ISSUES

ALEXANDRA PRENTISS

MASS MEDIA AND POLITICAL ISSUES

Mass Media and Political Issues

Editor:

Alexandra Prentiss

a

ArclerPress

www.arclerpress.com

Mass Media and Political Issues

Editor: Alexandra Prentiss

© 2017 Arcler Press LLC
708 3rd Avenue, 6th Floor
New York
NY 10017
United States of America
www.arclerpress.com

ISBN: 978-1-68094-509-6

Library of Congress Control Number: 2016951364

This book contains information obtained from highly regarded resources. Reprinted material sources are indicated. Copyright for individual articles remains with the authors as indicated. A Wide variety of references are listed. Reasonable efforts have been made to publish reliable data and views articulated in the chapters are those of the individual contributors, and not necessarily those of the editors or publishers. Editors or publishers are not responsible for the accuracy of the information in the published chapters or consequences of their use. The publisher believes no responsibility for any damage or grievance to the persons or property arising out of the use of any materials, instructions, methods or thoughts in the book. The editors and the publisher have attempted to trace the copyright holders of all material reproduced in this publication and apologize to copyright holders if permission has not been obtained. If any copyright holder has not been acknowledged, please write to us so we may rectify.

Notice: Registered trademark of products or corporate names are used only for explanation and identification without intent of infringement.

Arcler Press LLC publishes wide variety of books and eBooks. For more information about Arcler Press and its products, visit our website at www.arclerpress.com

Contents

List of Contributors.....	xi
Preface.....	xv
Introduction.....	xvii
Chapter 1 Mass Media's Manipulative Potential in Political Discourse.....	1
1. Introduction.....	1
2. Manipulation By Mass Media.....	1
Conclusion.....	5
References.....	6
Chapter 2 Information Warfare Technologies in Political Discourse.....	7
1. Introduction.....	7
2. Materials and Methods.....	8
3. Results and Discussion.....	10
Conclusion.....	14
Acknowledgment.....	14
References.....	14
Chapter 3 Politics in the Olympic Games.....	17
1. Introduction.....	17
2. Literature Review.....	18
3. The Call for and Development of an Olympic Boycott, and the Media's Support of it.....	20
4. It Could Not Happen Again, Right?.....	24
5. Discussion.....	25
Conclusion.....	26
References.....	27
Chapter 4 Internet Aggregators Constructing the Political Right Wing.....	31
1. Net-Uyoku – Japanese Rightwingers in Cyberspace and the Aggregation Process of the Matome Saito A Ggregators in Japan.....	33
2. Political Information Aggregation and Matome Saito No Matome Aggregators.....	37
3. How are Matome Saito Aggregators Used Among Japanese.....	39
4. The December 2012 House of Representatives Election in Japan.....	40
5. Content Analysis of Matome Saito Aggregators From November to December 2012.....	41

6.	Discussion – Construction of the Political Right Wing in Japan?	45
	References	47
Chapter 5	Misrepresentation of the Bosnian War by Western Media	51
1.	Introduction	51
2.	Metaphors and Fantasies	53
3.	War Reporting: by Standing or Attached?	54
4.	Analysis	54
	Conclusion.....	61
	References	62
Chapter 6	Journalistic Coverage of Political and Financial Crises and the “Issue” of Political Corruption	65
1.	Preamble.....	65
2.	Contexts of News Coverage and Political	66
3.	Communication	66
4.	Framing Crisis and Corruption.....	69
5.	Political Corruption	73
6.	Disclosure and Transparency: An Inconclusive Conclusion	74
	References	76
Chapter 7	Reshaping the Hegemony.....	79
1.	Introduction	79
	References	92
Chapter 8	Negotiating the Political Self on Social Media Platforms.....	93
1.	Image-Management and Election-Campaigning on Social Media Platforms.....	94
2.	Context and Case	97
3.	Notes on Methodology.....	99
4.	Results	100
	Conclusion.....	108
	Acknowledgement	110
	References	111
Chapter 9	Politician 2.0	115
1.	Wegov – Where Egovernment Meets The Esociety Project Background.....	116
2.	Interview With Parliamentary Decision-Makers	117
3.	Direct Feedback On The Wegov Toolbox And Its Basic Use Case..	117
4.	“Politician 2.0 Up Close And Personal With Short Track To The Citizen”	118
5.	A Fresh Insight Into Opinion Mining - “An Unobserved Look-Out”	120

6.	The Problem with Authentication of Politicians' Online Profiles ...	122
7.	Discussion	124
	References	124
Chapter 10	Political Communication: A Study on the Use of New Media in Politics	127
1.	Introduction	127
2.	Review of Literature	128
3.	Methodology.....	133
4.	Findings and Analysis.....	134
	Conclusion.....	145
	Acknowledgement	147
	References	147
Chapter 11	Examining the Dynamics of Crosscutting Exposure and Political Expression in Online Social Media	153
1.	Social Media as a Sphere for Political Discourse	154
2.	Crosscutting Exposure in Social Media	154
3.	The Behavioral Consequences of Crosscutting Exposure.....	155
4.	The 2012 South Korean Presidential Election Context	156
5.	Method	157
6.	Measures.....	158
7.	Results	159
8.	Discussion	162
	Acknowledgement	163
	References	164
Chapter 12	Social Media and Citizen Journalism.....	167
1.	Introduction	167
2.	Social Movements Model.....	169
3.	The Case of Neda Agha-Soltan	172
4.	Social Media and Social Movements.....	175
	Conclusions	180
	References	181
Chapter 13	Political Campaigning 2.0	185
1.	Explicit and Implicit Measures of Attitudes	186
2.	Valence of Information in Political Campaigns	187
3.	Source and Attentional Processing.....	188
4.	Aim and Study Hypotheses	190
5.	Method	191
6.	Results	195
7.	Discussion and Conclusions.....	199

Acknowledgement	202
References	202

Chapter 14 Public Opinion and Multiplatform Journalism 207

1. Subjects-References: Between Representations and Mediations.....	207
2. Audience Reconfiguration and New Forms of Subjectivity.....	209
3. Final Considerations.....	215
References	216

Chapter 15 E-Democracy Remixed 219

1. E-Democracy and Public Service Broadcasting.....	220
2. The Bbc Eparticipation Project	222
3. Assessing the Bbc's Eparticipation Project.....	224
4. Rethinking Online Engagement.....	226
Conclusion.....	229
References	230

Chapter 16 Fair Lady: Effective Coverage of Politics in a Women's Magazine..... 235

1. Introduction and Problem Statement	235
2. Research Method	239
3. Discussion of Results.....	240
Conclusion.....	248
References	249

Chapter 17 Exploring the Agenda-Setting Potential of Homeland Online Newspapers on Perceptions of Elections Issues Among Diasporic Nigerians in Malaysia..... 255

1. Literature Review	257
2. Methods.....	261
3. Findings	263
4. Discussion	267
Conclusion.....	268
References	269

Chapter 18 Politics Backstage-Television Documentaries, Politics and Politicians .. 275

1. The Transformation of Visibility.....	276
2. The Personification of Politics	277
3. Small Nation Global Politics	279
4. Biography of a Loser.....	281
5. Mediated Politics and Backstage	284
References	285

Index 287

Mass Media and Political Issues

The relationship between politics and mass media has existed since the inception of the notion of state. It is a complex, often fraught, relationship, in which audiences, discursive actors, and agendas shift frequently. Mass media provides a dual function when it comes to political issues. Some articles featured in this book will deal with the traditional relationships between politics and mass media, including propaganda, expose, and hegemony. Traditional top down media, such as newspapers and television broadcasts, inform the populace of what is occurring in politics; the newer forms of citizen-generated platforms, such as social media, can also inform the politicians of their constituents' concerns. Here, we will be examining these dual roles: how the media shape citizens' attitudes and behaviors in relation to politics, and also how citizens are in turn able to influence the political process in new, and sometimes revolutionary, ways. Different aspects of the interplay between audience and politics, including agenda setting, and targeting demographics will be highlighted in several case studies. No consideration of the relationship between politics and mass media is complete without a discussion of the use of mass media as propaganda, or a tool of manipulation, by politicians, as 'Mass media's manipulative potential in political discourse' will illuminate. The use of the Internet and mass media for propagation of ideas and propaganda is not limited to intra-national contexts, but is also relevant on the geopolitical level, as 'Information warfare technologies in political discourse' shows. Nations have their own agendas on the world stage, even when it comes to seemingly non-political events like the Olympics, which will be investigated in 'The Interference of Politics in the Olympic Games, and How the US Media Contribute to It'. New media enables new ways of agenda-setting, as discourse analysis reveals in 'Internet Aggregators Constructing the Political Right Wing in Japan'. The misrepresentation of distant events can have a direct effect on how audiences perceive those events, and thus on how policy is shaped, as evidenced by 'Misrepresentation of the Bosnian War by Western media'. Nowhere has mass media been more instrumental in shaping public opinion than in cases of political corruption. The relationship between news coverage and political corruption in Western democracies will be considered in the article, 'Journalistic coverage of political and financial crises and the "issue" of political corruption'. On the flip side of the exposure of political corruption by objective news sources is the role of state-owned media in promoting the political elite's agenda, as discussed in 'Reshaping the Hegemony: State-Owned Media in Egypt after the Revolution'. Is social media a legitimate sphere for public discourse? Several of the articles in this book will parse this question. In keeping with the objective of looking at the interplay between politics and mass media, case studies will demonstrate how social media has affected how politicians disseminate information, as well as how citizens discuss politics and interact with government. To provide perspectives on how politicians communicate with constituents, several recent elections in different countries will be discussed. 'Negotiating the Political Self on Social Media Platforms: An In-Depth Study of Image-Management in an Election-Campaign in a Multi-Party Democracy' looks at a Swedish parliamentarian's use of social media in the 2010 elections, in conjunction with a communications agency, examines how she was able to monitor her self-presentation via this new conduit. In interviews with a number of European Union parliamentary assistants, 'Politician 2.0: Information Behavior and Dissemination on Social Networking Sites-Gaps and Best-Practices' delves into how and why politicians use social media to present information and monitor their profiles. 'Political Communication in Malaysia: A Study on the Use of New Media in Politics' addresses a completely different type of government, in which one political party has been in power for almost 60 years; social media has been found to have broadened citizen participation in Malaysian politics and to have even begun to challenge the status quo. 'A Trigger or a Muffler? Examining the Dynamics of Crosscutting Exposure and Political Expression in Online Social Media' is South Korean investigation into the 2012 presidential elections analyzes whether social media is a place where political conversations between citizens are sparked, or whether it muffles their voices by narrowing the scope of their political views. The Middle East, traditionally a public sphere that severely curtailed political discourse, social media has fundamentally changed the ways in which citizens communicate about political events like social uprisings, including the 2009 Iranian protests, which will be examined in 'Social Media and Citizen Journalism in the 2009 Iranian Protests: The Case of Neda Agha-Soltan'. It is important to consider both traditional news sources as well as newer ones as channels via which politics are presented. This book includes a study comparing how the influence of a political campaign differs between online news and social networking sites, in 'Political campaigning 2.0: The interagency between active and passive audiences as new discursive actors appear in the public sphere as a result of new and emergent technologies is discussed in 'The Extended Space of Public Opinion in the Context of Multi-Platform Journalism: From Speakers to Discursive Actors', which examines how public opinion of the current Israel/Palestine conflict is shaped. Some traditional news sources are leveraging new forms of media facilitated by the Internet to increase what was previously a wane in civic engagement in politics, including low voter turnout, as 'E-democracy remixed: Learning from the BBC's Action Network and the shift from a static commons to a participatory multiplex' demonstrates. Politics are necessarily targeted to certain demographics; media seeking to reach these demographics target certain audiences. One might think of news as a primary source of political information; however, other traditional media also warrant examination. For example, 'Fair Lady: effective coverage of politics in a women's magazine' presents a study of Fair Lady, a South African magazine targeting women, whose pages are not traditionally associated with political coverage, revealed how it was able to shape its audience politically. An interesting result of globalization, increased migration, and augmented flow of information has been in how foreign nationals perceive homeland politics via online news sources. The case of Nigerians living in Malaysia will be discussed in 'Exploring the agenda-setting potential of homeland online newspapers on perceptions of elections issues among diasporic Nigerians in Malaysia'. Finally, with the proliferation of entertainment-based media, there has been increased interest in the intersection between politicians' private and public lives, especially via televised programs, as evidenced by the article, 'Politics Backstage-Television Documentaries, Politics and Politicians'. This has become an important way for politicians to monitor their self-presentation to the public.

A native of Rhode Island, in the U.S., Alexandra obtained her Bachelor's degree in History from Johns Hopkins University and her Master's in Media and Communications from the London School of Economics. Her Master's dissertation examined blogs through the lens of psychoanalysis. She has worked internationally in Prague, Marseille, Tel Aviv, New York and Seattle in various communication and marketing positions in industries such as consumer goods, technology and event planning. Her current interests lie in editing and corporate content development.

a ArclerPress

8000-00

ISBN 978-1-68094-509-6

