"Ages of Anxiety continues the opening of a field that has woefully neglected comparative questions, both within countries including the United States, and especially worldwide. Moving beyond the U.S. case gives a breath of fresh air to research, teaching, public policy, and social practice, and will be vital to addressing the actual and interconnected global crises of juvenile injustice."

—GEOFF WARD, author of

The Black Child-Savers: Racial Democracy and Juvenile Justice

"Ages of Anxiety is a bold volume, not just in its transnational perspective and focus on the neglected middle decades of the twentieth century, but in its commitment to bringing in-depth social and political history to bear on policy discourse in juvenile justice today. The editors also advance an intriguing theoretical model regarding 'moral panics' that has potential to drive new historical and sociological inquiries into the evolution of juvenile justice policies."

—STEVEN SCHLOSSMAN,

author of Transforming Juvenile Justice: Reform Ideals and Institutional Realities
